POSSIBILITIES IN CORN.

With Special Reference to Several Varieties of Sweet Brands.

It is not too late to consider sweet corn, of which there are several varieties. The illustration gives an idea of the high state of perfection to which any species of corn, sweet or otherwise, can attain when cultivated with care. The illustration shows the possibilities of the better brands when properly planted and grown under good conditions.

A popular standard of sweet corn is the Early White Cob Cury. The White Cob has all the good qualities of its parent and with the added advantage of having a white cob and pure white grains. The stalks are of medium height, stout and stocky, allowing a close planting. In good land, well fertilized, two ears may be grown to the stalk. It is not only the best early variety, producing marketable ears fifty-five days from germination, but it is also the best corn to plant for the early fall market.

WHAT CULTURE WILL DO FOR CORN.

The Country Gentleman is the best second early variety for the private family as well as for the retail trade. The corn is of delicious quality—considered the sweetest in cultivation. Planted on rich ground and given extra fertilizing and culture, two or three large ears can be grown to the stalk. Sweetly flavored, it is the standard variety both for market and for the private family. The ears are of large size, grains deep, tender and sweet, a vigorous grower, producing one to two large ears to the stalk. It requires fully sixty days to mature marketable ears.

To have a succession plant every twelve days. The ground for sweet corn should be deeply plowed, harrowed and rolled until fine and mellow. Spread well rotted, rich manure in the furrows, then sow 400 pounds of a complete fertilizer to the acre on top of the mixture; mix the manure and phosphate with the earth; drop three grains twenty inches apart in the row. Hubbard squash or crook neck pumpkins may be planted in every fifth row. Give frequent and thorough culture. Two good workings with the hoe should be given. In eastern corn states the varieties referred to are planted as late as the last of July.

Founding the Farm Flock.

The small farm flock, although it be one of the side issues of the farm, should be handled with a view to giving it an opportunity to yield maximum returns. Care should be given to the selection of parent stock. Well formed, healthy, deep milking ewes are the foundation rock of successful lamb growing. A well bred, vigorous ram of the approved market type is indispensable. Compare with market demands in quality, condition and weight of the lambs offered makes it necessary that they be well fed, for the lamb that is not fat will not grade as choice or prime. It is further necessary to castrate the ram lamb when he is a few days old. The ram lamb becomes coarse and loses in flesh when his sex instinct develops and hence is strongly discriminated against by the market. At all times an effort should be made to keep the flock healthy and free from internal parasites.—Professor W. C. Coffey in Illinois Agriculturist.

Black Knot in Plum Trees.

The best treatment for black knot in plum trees is to cut out the knots during the winter season, going way down into the healthy wood, and paint the wound with a strong solution of copper sulphate in water. Worms on current bushes will be easily killed by dusting the leaves as soon as they are noticed with powdered hellebore or paris green. Both remedies are effective, but the hellebore has the advantage of not being poisonous to man or animal.—Rural New Yorker.

Flock Management.

Probably the most important time in flock management is the breeding season, writes an Iowa farmer in American Agriculturist. After a ram is chosen the ewes that he breeds should not be less than one year old, or never breed any lambs. It does not pay financially, as it decreases the size and runs the flock to scrubby, small and inferior animals. The breeding season will begin in October and probably last to Dec. 1, according to the lambing accommodations.

Horse Cough Remedy.

Mix up a cough powder composed of powdered chlorate of potash, six ounces; powdered lobelia, five ounces; Jamaica ginger, four ounces; granulated sugar, one pound. Place a tablespoonful of this in the feed box before feeding the horse and put the feed on top of it; also use a mixture of aqua ammonia, one ounce, and olive oil, three ounces, on the glands of the throat and along the windpipe daily until the skin becomes tender.—National Stockman.

Blisters in Chickens.

Air blisters often show themselves in young chicks. The skin puffs out and seems like a bladder of wind. It comes on the abdomen, sides and under the wings and neck. Prick the blisters with a needle to let out the air. Add carbonate of iron, alternated with granulated charcoal, daily in the food. The diet should be oatmeal principally, with plenty of sharp grit within reach.—Western Poultry Journal.

Worms in Horses.

Green grass grazing at this time of the year is all that is needed temporarily to rid horses of worms. If they cannot be grazed mix a tablespoonful of a mixture of equal parts of dried sulphate of iron, salt, flowers of sulphur and ground gentian root in the feed night and morning for ten days, then skip ten days and repeat. Omit the iron if for pregnant mares.—Breeder's Gazette.

Summer Care of Chickens.

Cleanliness in housing, regularity in feeding and freedom of range are very important in rearing chicks. A variety of wholesome feed should be supplied regularly. If possible the flock should be kept on virgin soil, where there is plenty of vegetation and shade. This will supply natural conditions for the birds, which will thus be maintained in healthy condition.—Cor. American Agriculturist.

Remedy For Bloody Milk.

Give the cow one pound epsom salts, one ounce powdered nitrate of potassium, one ounce powdered gentian; mix with a quart of hot water and give when cold. Put in feed twice a day a dose of this powder: Bicarbonate of soda, eight ounces; bicarbonate of potassium, six ounces; powdered charcoal, four ounces; mix. Dose, two tablespoonfuls.—Country Gentleman.

Use Care in Feeding Fowls.

Fowls must not be starved. They should have only what they will eat up clean, says Western Poultry Journal. Their feed feeding method, however, allows food to be constantly before the fowls in hoppers. Champions of this method claim that fowls will not overfeed when dry material is constantly before them, for they eat it only by degrees, taking with the drafts of water to wash down the food. This, we believe, should be allowed only with dry fowls and not with whole or cracked grain. In the latter case the amount should be limited to an average of a handful for each fowl in the pen and scattered among litter so as to induce exercising.

Milk For Poultry.

All kinds of poultry have a great fondness for either sweet or sour milk. It is a cheap food when properly fed. Separator milk, direct from the factory, mixed with corn chop, makes one of the best foods to fatten old hens. For laying hens and half grown chickens it may be poured into troughs just as it comes from the factory. For young chickens and turkeys it should be made into curds. The milk must be fed with judgment, especially to young turkeys, as all overfeeding will prove fatal. A moderate feed is all right, but too much will cause a loss. Give a small feed of curd mixed with corn chop late in the afternoon.

A Necessity This Summer.

"What's that extra trunk for?" asks the father.
"Extra trunk?" inquires the mother.
"I don't understand you."
"That big one over there. We've never carried one like it on our summer trips. I'll cost us something fierce for excess baggage."
"Oh, that one? We've not to have it this time. It holds the extra hair puff and switches for myself and the girls."—Chicago Post.

A Question of Quietude.

"Where's your father?" asked the summer boarder.
"Gone fishin'," answered the boy with one suspender. "He has some of the queerest luck you ever heard of."
"Why didn't you go with him?"
"Dad wouldn't let me. When he goes fishin' he doesn't want anybody to disturb him while he's thinkin' up the things he's goin' to tell when he gets home."—Washington Star.

Fine Crop.

"Do you raise anything worth while in your garden?" said the visitor from the city.
"I should say so," answered Mr. Cresslotts. "It's the best place for fishin' worms in the entire village."—Washington Star.
